The story of the novel is set in the 19th century, during the time of the British colonial rule in India. The novel begins with the protagonist, a young Indian boy named Ramchandra, who is sent to England to receive a modern education. However, his education is not without its challenges, as he must learn to navigate the strict social norms and expectations of British society.

The novel explores themes of identity, culture, and the struggle for independence. As Ramchandra grows older, he becomes increasingly disillusioned with the British colonial system and begins to question his own place in the world. He ultimately decides to return to India and fight for his country's freedom.

The novel is written in a style that is both lyrical and descriptive, with a strong sense of place and atmosphere. It is a powerful and moving work that has been widely acclaimed for its depth and complexity.
